DOUGLAS CITIZENS WANT PROTECTION

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—On behalf of the citizens of Douglas, Sen. Ashurst has asked the state and war departments for property protection by American troops in the event of an engagement between Carranza and Villa. The fight, which is expected to be serious, is likely to take place at any time, when the Carranza troops, after being transported through the United States, pass over the Mexican border. Ashurst said he had a promise from the war department of a sufficient number of troops at Douglas to protect the city from the fire of either the Villa or the Carranza forces.
Ashurst informed the officials that without protection he feared that there was even a possibility that the Villa troops might make an attempt at looting. Secretary Garrison has wired General Finston to make any disposition of his troops which he found necessary to protect American interests along the border at that point. Information in possession of the department leads the officials to believe that between four and five thousand Carranza troops will be transported through the United States, and that Villa has approximately seven thousand. Villa is reported to be marching northward.

These Crusto rolls are as good as they look. Brown crust outside — feather-light, delicious "meat" inside.

Besides delicacy of flavor and lightness there's this feature to Crusto-made bread and rolls—they're pure white. That's because Crusto itself is so pure and made of such top-grade, perfectly refined materials that it brings out all the goodness of the flour. It can't jeopardize, it can only enhance results, being itself odorless, flavorless and colorless.

RAY-GILA VALLEY ROAD WINS TAX VALLEY SUIT

Pinal County Court Awards Excess Taxes to Road, Holding Impossible to Tax Mine Earnings According to Railroad

(Special to The Republican.)
FLORENCE, Oct. 26.—That the tax commission overvalued the Ray and Gila Valley railroad, and that the company should get judgment against Pinal county in the sum of $1841, the amount of the excess taxes paid in 1914, was the decision of the Pinal county superior court sitting without jury on the now famous suit.

In its deep investigation of facts surrounding the case, the court not only went into the law on the matter, but also looked up figures showing the actual cash value of the road, its earnings, its cost of reproduction, etc. The road has 9,345 miles of road, with 7,586 miles in Pinal county, and affected by the overtax. The estimated cost of rebuilding the road is $633,524.72. The depreciated cost, conceded by the plaintiff is $522,888.35.

In his opinion, Judge O. J. Baughin says, "We believe the tax commission in assessing this railroad at $114,500.00 per mile, placed a valuation on it in excess of its full cash value," but we do not believe that the assessment was made by the commission fraudulently, or with any intent to wrong or oppress the plaintiff. In fact, the intent of the tax commission appears to have been to reach and tax the large earnings, which the mining company, as owner of the railroad, had allowed it to earn, and thus prevent these earnings from escaping taxation."

The court conceded there is merit in the attempt of the commission to tax the road's earnings, but held the fact remains that the two corporations were in different classes for taxation. The court decided that the full taxable value per mile should be $52,312.70, and that the road should have paid for taxes in 1914, only $7,659.62, which is less by $1,841 than the amount actually paid. This sum in excess, with interest, is awarded to the plaintiff.

error of having wasted money in a most reprehensible manner.

Dr. Nelson also spoke scathingly of his excellency, and at one point remarked he would probably lose his national guard commission or else be sent to roost on the rockpile at Clifton.

O. S. Stapley spoke chiefly on what he had accomplished while in the senate. He described feebly, the many good measures he had supported, but which were assassinated, when they got to the executive.

At the close of the meeting, Mr. Alers said that the substance of a new recall petition would be wired by the Associated Press all over the state, and that in this way, the Mesa movement would acquire great publicity.

Although some of the sixty five who were present at the meeting walked out when the following resolution was presented, the large majority remained to sign it.

RESOLVED that the members of the commercial club of Mesa urgently request all commercial bodies and the citizens of the state of Arizona to join with them in the immediate recall of the governor, for the following reasons:

That the said George W. P. Hunt is utterly incompetent to perform the duties of his office and to observe the peace and dignity of the commonwealth;

That his administration has been wantonly and recklessly extravagant and that the burdens of the taxpayers have been unduly increased by reason of his reckless disregard of economy and his creation of unnecessary positions.

That the said George W. P. Hunt has wantonly disregarded and disobeyed the state laws, and has set himself above law and the courts, refusing to carry out their plainest mandates.

That he has deliberately attempted to foment and encourage class hatred and division.

That he has been partisan in his dealings with the most vital interests of the state and by deliberate catering to the most radical elements has created a condition approaching anarchy in certain sections of the state.

To Save Time By Passing On All Invoices

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—With the object of facilitating the release of American-owned goods of German and Belgian origin now held in Holland, the British embassy and state department officials are considering the feasibility of having some person or persons designated to pass upon guarantee invoices. Under some such arrangements permission might be obtained for the British embassy here to accept as final and sufficient the decision of such an arbitrator working in the United States and thereby save all the time now occupied in referring to London for approval the cases completed in Washington by embassy officials in conjunction with state department trade advisors.

Sir Cecil Spring Rice was in a conference with Counselor Polk on this subject but so far no conclusions have been reached. The state department has made representations seeking to extend from November 1 to December 1, the limit within which applications may be filed for the release of merchandise now held by the British order in council. Under the arrangement now in force, applications must be filed before November 1.

Hundreds of applications for permits have been filed with foreign trade advisors and many are now before the British embassy. Delay in disposing of the applications at the embassy has resulted in the request for an extension of time.

After they had been admitted in record, Attorney Swanker for the government, began the introduction of testimony intended to show that no action had been taken, the alleged conspiracy to further monopolize the transportation traffic of New England was continued.

This included a memorandum written by Charles Mellen, then second vice president of the New Haven, in which he suggested, in respect to the relations between the New Haven and the New England, neither should be allowed to make rates lower than the other, but their competition should be on "through facilities rather than on rates."

BAHAMAS FACE SOME PROBLEMS

As Result of European War Are Obligated to Provide Own Foodstuffs, Previously Having Largely Relied on Imports

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH]

NASSAU, Bahama Islands, British West Indies, Oct. 26.—Though properly a part of the British West Indies, the Bahama Islands have faced problems peculiar to themselves as a result of the European war, notably the problem of providing their own foodstuffs, whereas, prior to the war, they had relied almost entirely upon imports.

Unlike the islands to the South, the Bahamas have neither the soil nor the climate for the free growth of tropical fruits, though some, of course, are grown. The chief product here has been sponges and next to that, of late years, sisal for fibre. The growing of other products has been small, mainly because so many of the male population are engaged in the sponge industry, but there is also this factor, that the islanders have an exceptional tendency to buy foreign or imported food rather than accept the homegrown products, even when the latter are superior. For instance, women and children and some of the men grow sisal for fibre and clean it by hand, and spend the few cents they have earned in this laborious undertaking in the purchase of foreign foodstuffs that pay a duty of 25 per cent. This tendency has been encouraged and made the most of by the merchants as it increased their trade, and also by the government as it gave so much more revenue.

In view of these facts, when the war in Europe began, and the big sponge export to England was entirely stopped and the fibre industry was also hit hard, the Bahamas found themselves in the position of producing practically nothing that was saleable, while, on the other hand, the price of imported food products that the people had been relying on to such an extent rapidly advanced.

The government in view of the decreasing revenues decided to cut down expenditures, but this took the form of suspending public works entirely rather than making the slightest retrenchments in official salaries. More hardship was made for all classes when the banks put up interest rates of two per cent, and raised the rate of exchange to two per cent and with the government's increase of two per cent in the tariff, there was such an effect as only a region so dependent on imports as the Bahamas could understand.

There was hope that the winter tourist business would offset some of the other losses but after a considerable expense in putting hotels and boarding houses in repair it was discovered that instead of increasing the tourist business also fell off.

Outside observers remarked that in the face of so much depression, the uncomplaining spirit with which the islanders have faced the hardships has been remarkable. In addition to this, the people came forward with generous contributions to various war funds, and with a grant from the treasury, some $75,000 was raised. The women of the islands, have, after a year of work, not slackened in their sewing for war purposes. As a further indication of patriotism in the islands, there is now on foot a movement to enlist, this Lansdowne continued, it is unlikely that anything of the kind could occur. Earl Kitchener is present at every cabinet meeting and it is impossible to suppose that he would allow himself to be deflected from his course by pressure by his civilian colleagues.

equip and train 150 men for service at the front.

In respect to the local food problem it may be recalled that soon after the war began the governor of the islands called a mass meeting at the capital and advised the people to go to the soil and grow foodstuffs. This advice was so well taken that a complaint is heard from the merchants that trade is dull, that the people have grown so much corn and other home products that there is now little sale for imports.

likely that anything of the kind could occur. Earl Kitchener is present at every cabinet meeting and it is impossible to suppose that he would allow himself to be deflected from his course by pressure by his civilian colleagues.

Apart from that, the speaker added, the procedure by the committee and councils has given far greater opportunity for military naval experts to assert themselves and make their views known. The cabinet as a whole has considered both the naval and military political aspects of the case. The ministers and their advisers took account of both sides of the problems, but whatever particular views have been given by the military and naval advisors the ultimate responsibility for a decision on them must rest with the government.
